ONE DREAM FOR ANOTHER

GOSH, do you think every girl has had troubles like mine?

It all began one day about three weeks before the prom. I'd been going steady for about five months with Chuck Allen and, of course, it was understood that we'd go to the prom together. I walked around the school with my nose held pretty high, because it isn't everyone who goes steady with someone like Chuck.

He was a senior, the same as I, and in quite a few classes of mine. He started walking me to class once in awhile but at first I didn't give him a tumble. After all, just because he was president of the senior class and co-captain of the basketball team, he needn't think he just had to whistle and all the girls would come running. Maybe that's why our romance lasted five months, which is just about four and one-half months longer than most of his other loves.

Then, too, I was well-enough known myself. I'd been a cheer leader for three years and May Queen last year, and I was co-chairman of the prom.

That's what made it so bad—my being fairly popular and prom chairman and still not having a date, I mean. I hadn't had any premonition at all that Chuck was tiring of me until one day he didn't call at the usual time. And when he did call, he said, "Sorry Chris. I guess we'll have to forget about this Saturday night. The coach wants us to rest up for the game next week."

Of course, I was suspicious since Chuck had never pulled anything like that before—but on Saturday night! I placidly went to a movie with the girls.

It was a pretty dull evening although Penny Adams, my best friend and "soul" confider, and the rest of the girls tried to cheer me up. Penny had always told me that Chuck would drop me one day. That Saturday night she was pretty smug and wore her "I-told-you-so" look. The first thing she said to me when I went to pick her up was: "Where's your mourning clothes? You're a widow, now, aren't you?" I made some inane remark that I thought fitted hers and passed it off.

During the show and after, on the way to Doc's, the drugstore where all of us kids hang out, I sorted out my thoughts and gave myself a pretty good talking to. After all, when I'd been going with Chuck for five months, I shouldn't begrudge him one Saturday night's rest.

As I said, the girls really tried to cheer me up, and by the time we got to Doc's, I was in my usual, if not good, at least presentable, humor. It really was fun to be out with them again because I had neglected them for a long time, being so wrapped up in Chuck.

So we settled ourselves in the booth, talking over all the latest school gossip. But gradually the conversation dropped off due to a devotion to hamburgers and French fries. It was during this lull that I heard the talking in the next booth.

I hadn't noticed who the girls in the next booth were, but I recognized one of the voices. It was Nancy Warner, Chuck's "ex." As you can imagine, she didn't exactly embrace me as a bosom friend for practically taking Chuck away from her, although everyone knew that their romance was on its last legs.

But Nancy still had it in for me, and when I heard my name mentioned, I picked up my ears and listened.

"Can you feature this? Christine didn't even latch on to the fact that Chuck was promoting someone else! Of course, she was so darn sure of herself, she didn't even realize that he wasn't making all those trips over to Richmount just for the basketball team. There's a certain blond cheer leader at . . ."

Someone put a nickel in the juke box just then, so I didn't hear the rest of Nancy's rambling, but I'd gotten enough. Chuck had made a few lame excuses about team meetings.

I felt pretty bad and stared dully into my coke.

It hurt, too, to see Chuck come walking in with a girl that none of my gang had ever seen before. He saw me and waved feebly, but I know he'd probably rather have dropped dead than to have had me see him.

I took the hint, walked out of the drugstore and, as far as Chuck was concerned, out of his life.

As you can imagine, the next few days weren't exactly a joy to me. I was surprised how few friends I seemed to have. I know now it was just my very susceptible imagination that gave me the idea that the whole school was pointing me out as a jilted woman.

I saw Chuck in school, of course, but not if I could help it. After class I just about shot out of the door so it wouldn't look too awkward when Chuck didn't walk to the next class with me.

I tried to avoid girls like Nancy Warner, who would gloat over the fact that Chuck and I were through. I knew my whole life, social and educational, was at a dead halt.

I'd walk home at night, carrying my own books for a change, and sit around all night just waiting for the phone to ring and hoping it was Chuck. I'd take his picture off my dresser one minute, put it in my bureau drawer the next, take it out and start to tear it up, and end by putting it back on the dresser.

I'd look at my brand new blue satin formal hanging in my closet and think how Chuck would have liked it, if things hadn't changed. He always used to say "blue is your color, Chris. It matches your eyes, and makes your hair look like gold."

I'd listen to our song on the phonograph and remember the first time we heard it together and how it was catalogued right away as "our" song. "Dream" was the name of it, but the way I figured now, it was the realization of just how foolish dreams can be.

Of course, I snapped out of my lethargy eventually, but not completely, and finally resigned myself to the fact that it was "go out with the girls, or stay home." It's pretty hard, you know, to get back into circulation after having gone steady.

We were in Doc's after a game one night, when someone played "Dream" on the jukebox. That day had been pretty trying, and I was really blue. I didn't actually want to go to the game, but I knew I'd worn my heart on my sleeve long enough, and it was time to wake up. Chuck starred in that game, and I remembered how proud I used to be when he'd make a basket and then look over at me and grin. That night we played Richmount, and I saw him glance at one of their cheer leaders and wave at her. I deduced that it was the girl, or being more literal, the climax to our romance.

You can see how what was once our song affected me that night. It brought back all the nostalgia of the past five months.

For the second time in about a week, I vacated Doc's hurriedly, before anyone could see the tears in my eyes. Chuck was on the way in, as I came out, but you'd never have known he'd even seen me.

Outside, I drew a deep breath of the revoltingly beautiful night and started on my way home, with a lump the size of one of Chuck's basketballs in my throat.

I'd walked about a block, when I heard someone calling me. I didn't dare hope it was Chuck, so I wasn't disappointed. I didn't recognize the figure approaching me at all. Then, like a ton of bricks, it hit me.

It was a blue serge figure wrapped up in one of those form-fitting sailor suits that every girl swoons over.

I'd heard that Tim Shaw, the boy next door, was home on leave from the navy, but it wasn't until I looked up to that six-foot-two-eyes-of-blue hunk of young manhood, that I remembered him. Sure 'nuff, it was Tim, the "older" man who always used to call me stinker and pest. He'd gone into the navy, two years before, right after his eighteenth birthday, and I'd been too wrapped up in high school kids to notice him.

"How are you, Chris?" that lovely masculine voice asked. I put that basketball of Chuck's that had been stuck in my throat right out of mind and answered, "F-F-Fine."

"I was over to see your family tonight, but you'd already gone out, so I thought I'd walk down to Doc's to see if any of the old crowd was about." Then, after a long pause, "Gee, Chris, you've grown up this last year! What've you done to yourself?"

All of a sudden the stars twinkled more brightly, the night seemed wonderful, and I felt fine. The look in Tim's eyes as he inspected me was enough to change anyone's mind about what a tough life it was.

Well, all this was quite a while ago, and Tim has gone back to the navy. I write to him everyday, and there's sort of an understanding about an understanding.

I haven't been out with Chuck since that night at Doc's, although he still calls me once in awhile. After all, Chuck is only eighteen, and I like older men.

THE END. 007

BLACKHEADS "PET HATE"

Say Men, Girls in Choosing Date

What a "black mark" is the blackhead . . . according to men and girls popular enough to be choosy about dates!

"Nobody's dreamboat!" "Nobody's date bait!" And that's not all that's said of those who are careless about blackheads. But blackheads ARE ugly! Blackheads ARE grimy! And they DON'T look good in close-ups!

So can you blame the fellow who says, "Sure, I meet lots of girls who look cute at first glance. But if, on that second glance, I see dingy blackheads, it's good night!"

Or can you blame the girl who confesses, "I hate to go out with a fellow who has blackheads. If he's careless about that you're sure he'll embarrass you in other ways, too!"

But you—are YOUR ears burning? Well, you've company and, sad to say, good company. There are lots of otherwise attractive fellows and girls who could date anyone they like if they'd only realize how offensive blackheads are . . . and how easily and quickly they could get rid of them . . . if they want to!

"He-Man" Often Guilty of Blackhead Crime

Take your "he-man" . . . super at track, games, sports of all kinds . . . who thinks that after just a shower he's ready to go anywhere! And won't the girls all admire his muscles!

Sure they would! But not many dance floors are set up for hurdle races! You can't show off your snappy left hook when only cokes are in the ring. The "he-man" who's also clean-cut, will get the breaks wherever he is.

Even Cute Girls Become Careless

Easy, too easy, for a girl to think that if she has the latest in clothes and hair-do she needn't bother about blackheads. A little more make-up, she guesses, will take care of that. BUT MAKE-UP WON'T HIDE BLACKHEADS! Not unless it's plaster of paris, maybe! And even good make-up "slips" at a dance! So don't take chances, cute though you may be!

TAKE THESE TIPS TO BANISH BLACKHEADS

Keep skin clean by washing morning and night with warm, almost hot, water. Use good soap and plenty of it. And finish with cool water.

Extract every blackhead as soon as you see it—with a SAFE extractor. Don't use finger nails. Don't squeeze. That may mean infection, injured tissues, a marred skin.

Just be clean! Be quick! And be safe! That's easy! And that's ALL!

I WONDER WHY WE'RE NOT POPULAR SIS?
ASK YOUR FRIEND TOM
TOM, WHY DON'T SIS AND I GET INVITED TO PROMS AND PARTIES
FRANKLY, JIM IT'S THOSE UGLY BLACKHEADS

Without painful squeezing! Without dangerous infection from germy fingers! Just place VACUTEX over blackhead and draw back extractor. Blackhead's out! Simple!
